Indicative Content

Key theories and perspectives of leadership and management

The student will be introduced to the schools of thought of management theory (classical, contingency, scientific) and will discuss the concepts of management and leadership. They will be introduced to the ongoing academic debate about the similarities and differences between managers and leaders. Students will be exposed to both traditional and contemporary perspectives. There has been and continues to be much academic debate in this area and students will be exposed to contributors such as Drucker, Adair, Blanchard and Johnson, Ulrich etc. Learners will be encouraged to look at a range of areas to consider if a managerial approach or a more long-term strategic approach is appropriate in various contexts. The role of the manager and the leader will be fully explored in this module and their part in developing the vision and culture of the organisation and the subsequent production of objectives.

Meanings of Management

TASK 1: Work in pairs. Discuss various meanings of the word “management”. Construct a table in which you list and illustrate some key elements of management as a discipline, as a function and as a social group

Meaning
Management as discipline
Management as function
Management as a social group or elite

Meanings of Management

Meaning	Definition
Management as discipline	Practices directed to increasing output to a given input. Employed by many people but institutionalized in work organizations	 Cole & Kelly, 2020
Management as function	Essential and universal component of organized activity
Management as a social group or elite	Social and organisational stratum that is positioned between a small number of owners (people managers) and a mass of employees (individual contributors)
Management as a.... ?	A Vocation: The decision to give up your own on comfort in life and accept the ongoing readiness to challenge and change yourself	 You...?
